BEAUTY PRIZE HONOR CROWNS 6TH TRIAL

Dark-eyed beauty with the added charm of luxuriant brown curls looked stunning in a red one-piece bathing suit and won the applause of 80,000 admiring spectators.

Miss Marie De Philipo, member of the senior class of the Revere High School and classmate of Emma Hambro, another beauty prize cup winner, is one of the most popular and attractive girls in Revere and her choice gave great satisfaction to her numerous friends and admirers. She is only 16 years old but has the charm and poise to make her a real contender for the honors of being "Miss New England."

A dark-eyed Revere schoolgirl won the Boston Evening American's eighth preliminary Bathing Beauty Contest at Revere Beach. She was Marie De Philipo, 16, of No. 233 Beach street, Revere.

Last night's winner is a senior at Revere High School. She is a classmate of Emma Hambro who won one of the earlier preliminaries.

Miss De Philipo received a silver cup and was credited with five points toward the big final contest on Sept. 12 to select "Miss New England."

It was her sixth attempt to win the prize. Miss De Philipo has luxuriant brown curls. She wore a red one-piece suit.

More than 50,000 persons gathered to watch the parade of the beauties on the platform erected opposite the Nautical Garden's ballroom. All applauded the decision of the judges, E. C. Cain, president, Lorna Reed, when he awarded the cup to Miss De Philipo.

Honorable mention was given to the following girls by Mr. Cain: Marion Beahm, of No. 64 Tremont street, Boston; Shirley Wolfe, of No. 13 Florence avenue, Revere; Josephine Bukkus, of No. 33 Fulton street, Hyde Park; Marion Irving, of No. 3 Bainbridge street, Roxbury; Alice Hook, of No. 130 Shirley street, Winthrop; Kay McInnes of Columbia road, Dorchester; Anna Harris, of No. 186 Chestnut street, Lynn; and Maquette Cortes, of Hotel Pleasanton, Revere.

And every girl in New England is invited to enter the big final contest which will be held Saturday, September 12. The winner of the final contest will receive the title of "Miss New England" and $100 in gold.

Although the Bathing Beauty Contest will continue another week, the judging continues today. Fifty books of tickets, admitting the friends to twenty-seven attractions at the beach will be turned in the stands, above high water mark, between beach and Revere street.

WOMEN DEMAND PHONE BOARD ELECTION

Mrs. Osgood in Wild Parties, Says Housekeeper

REVEALERS KEPT HER AWAKE

Former Employe Says She Cared for Boy in Mother's Week-End Trips

Portland, Me. Sept. 4.—Society folk who thronged Cumberland Supermarket today were startled when a 30-year-old Mary A. Maher, a spinster housekeeper, referred to a chum of Mrs. Loretta M. Osgood as a "gold digger."

Miss Maher, formerly employed by Mrs. Osgood, residing for the defense in the suit, built by her former employer against Dr. Charles Osgood of New York and Winham, Me., a millionaire, is increased alimony.

Mrs. Osgood, who obtained a divorce from the man in 1917, seeks an increase on the $400 a month granted her at that time and absolute custody of their ten-year-old son, Henry.

Asked for her definition of the term "gold digger" which had been applied to a Mrs. Kim, the witness said:

DEFINES "GOLD DIGGER."

"A gold digger is a woman who gets money out of men for nothing," Miss Maher testified to the audience when, on being asked if she used mixed drinks, replied emphatically:

"I want you to distinctly understand I am sixty years old, single and a good woman, and I know nothing about mixed drinks."

The witness claimed she had offered her services in the present case to Dr. Osgood as a result of a row with Mrs. Osgood over a week's pay of $20 which she claimed was owed her when she quit through last February.

Miss Maher testified she lives in Ogunquit, Me., and for several months was employed by Mrs. Osgood as a housekeeper and nurse for Henry Osgood, a New York apartment.

BOY AS DAVID ALLY.

Judge Joseph E. P. Connolly, in cross-examination, brought out the admission that last January Henry told the witness his father was going to make a fight for him. She quoted the boy as saying:

"If Daddy fights for me, will you fight for me, too? If you will then I'll be able to live with Auntie Maud."

He referred to Mrs. Maud Hyde of Norwich, Ct.

The witness admitted she sent a threatening letter to Mrs. Osgood after getting through. In this letter she said she wrote:

"If you're not going to pay me the money I am owed me, then I know what I am going to do."

She admitted she intended offering her services to Dr. Osgood and did so.

Miss Maher testified that while acting as housekeeper she did not keep nights at the apartment, which, she said, was the scene of "one wild party after another."

LITTER AFTER REVEL.

The witness said when she arrived in the morning the place was littered with glasses, bottles, cigarette stubs and the remains of sandwiches.

A Mrs. King was in the apartment, a lot, Miss Maher said. She vouchsafed the statement that although the two women were friends they fought about all the time.

Asked if Mrs. Osgood had ever told her what Mrs. King did, the witness replied:

"Yes, she said Mrs. King was a gold digger."

It was at this point that she gave her definition of the term.

The witness said Mrs. Osgood told her she was going to marry a Mr. Gillespie, a wealthy New York banker, but there was some hitch which she thought could be straightened out.

Judge Chapman questioned the witness regarding the parties at the apartment. Miss Maher said that one morning in December when she arrived at the apartment she found Mrs. Osgood sick in bed, the result of a party the night before.

ALWAYS HAD LIQUOR.

"I said to her, 'That's the trouble. You shouldn't mix drinks,' Mrs. Osgood became angry."

BLAMES OSGOOD FOR HER FIRST DRINK

When Mrs. Loretta Osgood, divorced wife of Charles Osgood, millionaire physician of Winham, Maine, was taxed with being addicted to alcoholic stimulants in her suit for more alimony, now being tried at Portland, Maine, she testified that it was her husband who gave her her first drink after she had left the chorus of a musical comedy to become his bride. Mrs. Osgood, denied, however, that she was a habitual drinker. She admitted that she was engaged to Jean F. V. Hernet, ex-French embassy attaché, who is married by her former husband as one of the reasons why he should not pay.

Greater Boston Users Rally to Drive for Election of Rate Board

The women of Greater Boston today rallied enthusiastically in support of the campaign for election of members of the Public Utilities Commission by the people as provided in a bill filed with the Attorney-General by former Alderman Charles A. Coughlin of Medford.

Mrs. Winifred M. Buckley of Dorchester, president of the Housekeepers' Club of Massachusetts, declared that popular election of members of the commission promised the only relief from such exorbitant rates as those recently allowed by the commission to the New England Telephone Company.

Women's Opera Glasses Amaze Traffic Cops

Traffic cops are hardy individuals and it requires some of a phenomenon in the way of a phenomenon to fear them. But when an automobile, driven by a woman and carrying two other women, trilled through the downtown shopping district, all of its occupants fixating on close-up latest fashions in shop windows through opera glasses—the cops' jaws fell and they could only gasp their astonishment.

HELD IN $1,000 BAIL

ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Thomas Brown of Sea street, North Weymouth, was arraigned in Federal Court today on the charge of conspiracy to smuggle liquor. Deputy Collector Thomas F. Finnegan, who is prosecuting Brown, alleges he is the head of a liquor smuggling conspiracy that the customs service has been watching for several months. He alleges Brown was the "man on the short end" in the case of the boat 5593, captured Wednesday near Raccoon Island in Quincy Bay. Brown was held in $2,000 bail for a hearing on September 25.

MAYOR AND FAMILY IN CRASH

Curley, Wife, Daughter and Son Injured on Auto Ride

Seniors of State and city notables visited the Winchell Summer home of Mayor James M. Curley today to express sorrow over the auto accident which made the Mayor, Mrs. Curley, and their children, Mary and James M., Jr., its victims.

Mrs. Curley's nose was broken and the Mayor and son and daughter received cuts and bruises. Meanwhile the police of the entire Northwesterly and Hail district are securing the section in the effort to discover the man whose parked car, unlighted, was the cause of the accident.

The Curley car was when the parked machine before Miss Mary had any warning whatever, and before she had a chance to turn aside. The Curley party was returning from a motion picture theatre to their cottage at Weymouth.

HARRIMAN'S PROSECUTOR IN CRASH WON'T TESTIFY
New York, Sept. 4 (A.P.)—Allen Harriman, son of Joseph W. Harriman, founder and president of the Harriman National Bank, was freed to traffic court today on a charge of reckless driving, when the complainant in the case, a taxi-driver, refused to prosecute. On June 11, Harriman was taken to a hospital, suffering from shock after his automobile hit two other cars and struck Miss Catherine Schellberger of Orange, N. J. Miss Schellberger has a $25,000 suit pending against Harriman as a result.

MAINE MAN JAILED ON VAGRANCY CHARGE
William Macdonald, 34, of Portland, Me., was arrested by New York police after complaints had been made that he had posed as a Red Cross solicitor. He claims to be a Canadian war veteran. John Connolly in New York court sent Macdonald to the House of Correction for ten days on a vagrancy charge.

light company, being obliged to keep on a normal night-time current.

She was unharmed. The house caught fire, but the damage was only slight.
At the home of Alfred Chisholm, No. 23 Orchard street, Malden, the lightning tore a hole in the side of the house and started a $250 fire. Then the bolt proceeded along a ditch to rip another building hole in the house at No. 37 Orchard street. No fire was started there.

The chimney of R. R. Houlston's house at No. 137 Green street, Malden, was disintegrated by a lightning bolt and the resultant fire was extinguished after some brick work in the rain by the firemen and a $100 loss.

In the market garden section, lying on the outskirts of the city, the heavy rains did some damage, according to early but incomplete reports. The absence of a high wind prevented really serious damage. Roadbeds in the hilly sections of Lexington and other out- towns were rutted and disintegrated by floods that followed the rains. At No. 3 Columbus road, Lexington, lightning followed electric wires into the house and started a blaze. The damage was not great.

Checks Pay Off Malden Police Since Robbery

Malden police and firemen are receiving their pay this week by check. Following the robbery of the Malden city treasurer's office a week ago, when more than $600 in pay envelopes for the police were taken, it has been decided to pay both police and fire department members by check. Malden police have not yet succeeded in getting trace of the thief who took their cash.

There was a steady stream of policemen and firemen to the banks, cashing the new pay checks.

left her brain to Cornell University, saying she thought her brain as good as a man's, and wanted to grow it. The doctors announced that it was a big brain, weighing 1,150 grams, exactly as much as the brain of Dr. Wilder, added to the Cornell collection last January.

THE BRAINS OF Mrs. Gardner and Dr. Wilder will rest side by side on the shelf. Scientists will study them. Perhaps the souls that once inhabited them will be allowed to come back and look at their former residences.

BUT MERE size in brain means little. Articular development of ONE gram in a brain of 1,150 grams might mean the difference between greatness and nothingness. It's the QUALITY in your brain, and the USE you make of it, that counts.

IT IS SUGGESTED that railroads be forced to combine in transportation units, and that they make their own selections "rather than have the government do the choosing for them."

Why not have a selection of well informed men, railroad men of course, acquainted with traffic conditions, make a survey of railroads, and let the government know which combination should be made in the interest of economy and of efficiency?

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE will certainly not think it wise to leave these combinations to selfish interests based on opportunities for stock jobbing, combining broken down roads with good roads for the sake of immediate profit, rather than more efficiency, perhaps for the sake of unloading unprofitable railroads on the stockholders that own profitable railroads.

VOLTAIRE, WHOSE will was as admirable as his irreverence was deplorable, said: "If there were no God, it would have been necessary to invent one."

You learn from Russia that if there were no saints, with healing powers, surviving them, it might be necessary to invent some. Balbriggan has done its best to drive out religion. But religion always creeps back, with a different name, perhaps.

The dead Lenin is being rapidly manufactured into a saint with healing powers. In every Russian school he has his "corner," and the corners are rapidly becoming "sacred shrines."

One young girl already testified that six visits to Lenin's tomb, with meditation on his virtues, have given her health and strength, greater courage in life. The human mind craves mystery and will have it.

VANDERBILT'S WIFE LOSES DEATH RACE

and daughter of the American consul-general at Brussels.

Word came out of Sandy Point Farm, seven miles from Newport, that the comparatively young man of wealth died from internal hemorrhage.

Earlier in the week, the young wife with her mother had left Newport for New York, intending to sail tomorrow for South America, where the consul-general is now stationed.

Vanderbilt was understood to be in his average good health at that time, but shortly after midnight today he suffered a hemorrhage. A telegram was despatched to New York, bringing Gloria and her mother flying back to the country estate, with reservations for the trip cancelled.

In a greatly weakened condition from the first hemorrhage, Vanderbilt suffered a second at 4:30, which closed out his life.

GAY STUDENT AT YALE.

The youngest son of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt was a grandson of Commodore William H. Vanderbilt, founder of the tremendous fortune that now stands greatly enlarged, but divided among the many descendants.

Reginald's share, when he reached the age of twenty-one in 1902 was $12,500,000 outright and $5,000,000 in a trust fund.

At that time he was a gay student of Yale. His bets on the various Yale teams in his mother's aroused considerable excitement in college circles, but he paid or collected calmly, in accordance with the direction luck turned.

Although popular at Yale, he underwent a great disappointment through being tagged on "Tap Day" for "Wolf's Head," rather than for "Bones" or "Scorl and Key," senior societies to which his forebears had belonged.

Yale refused him a degree in 1905 because he failed to pass in law. Four months later, however, the parchment was bestowed upon him.

A few weeks after receiving his degree, young Vanderbilt sat down at a roulette table in a New York gambling house.

He preferred a game to begin his play. Within a short time the bank had returned him his check and he paid over $5,000 more. He won steadily until he had $20,000.

Then luck broke and the check for $10,000 went back to the croupier and with it other checks totalling $11,000.

Finally the proprietor of the house complained upon the flimsy youth to discontinue playing. The boy's plunging was the talk of his associates for many weeks.

Just out of college, young Vanderbilt told his mother, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, that he was enamored of Miss Cathleen Oshbourn Nelson, daughter of Mrs. Frederick H. Nelson.

Opposition to the match was immediately made by Mrs. Vanderbilt because of the youth of the couple and because Miss Nelson, although a Catholic, had a divorced sister, and Mrs. Vanderbilt was bitterly opposed to divorce.

FIRST MARRIAGE UNHAPPY.

On the Nelson side of the amour, the match also was opposed because of youth and the difference in religion. The lovers saw one, however, announced their engagement in August, 1902, and were married at Newport on April 14, 1903.

Their only child, Cathleen Vanderbilt (now Mrs. Harry C. Cushing, 50) was born in 1904.

The Vanderbilts lived happily until 1913 when difficulties arose.

Vanderbilt fled to Paris, followed by his wife. She claimed, in her divorce action in 1915, that he left her stranded there without funds.

Previous to this squall, Mrs. Vanderbilt had caused a portrait of herself by an artist, to be reproduced on the cover of a French magazine.

Others of her exploits made her a much talked of woman in her own circle, especially the wearing of diamonds in her heels and her attempt to be made a deputy sheriff and carry a revolver.

The couple were divorced in 1920.

and Mrs. Vanderbilt subsequently was married to Sydney J. Colford, Jr., in January, 1921.

PLUNGED ON MARKET.

On March 6, 1913, Vanderbilt married 18-year-old Gloria Morgan, who was playing small motion picture parts and whom he met at a theatrical dinner. Four days after the wedding the bride contracted diphtheria.

She rallied and recovered, however, and a daughter, Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, was born to them seventeen months ago. The young wife is a sister of Mrs. James Van Overy and of the Countess De-Massas. Her grandfather was the late General Judson Kilpatrick, former Ambassador to Chile.

Vanderbilt, throughout his entire life, was a devotee of horses and polo, with sidelines the stock market and pain, in the latter of which type of ventures he, once lost just a million dollars in a single lunge. He was president of the National Horse Show Association of America, which he founded out of the American Hackney Horse Society.

A brother is General Cornelius Vanderbilt and a sister, Countess Lussio Szechenyi, with Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, another sister.

A second brother, Alfred Vanderbilt, went down with the ill-fated Lusitania, and Cornelius, through his will, received an additional $1,000,000.

Taste of Money

A Story that Bares the Soul of a Woman, Twice Cheated Out of a Love She Is Forced to Steal

JERROLD FREYNE, a promising young author who has written a book dealing coldly and calmly with love and marriage, is appointed to a clerkship in the Foreign Legation. ELSPETH VOICEY, a cold-sweet daughter of aristocracy, is his promised bride. While wedding plans are under discussion, Jerrold meets GERDA MASKLYN, wife

Jealousy, a thing he had not figured on, flares its green eyes at Jerrold Freyne. Elspeth has seen Jerrold and Mrs. Masklyn in the park. "Was that the woman you had at dinner?" she asks, as she brushes by him to her room and leaves him staring half defiant, half surprised.

of his friend. He is stricken by her strange beauty and by her bewitching appeal of person. Immediately he is given a new interpretation of love, vastly different from that he put into his book. The situation is rapidly getting beyond his control, and he finds his cultured philosophy being pushed aside by a feeling blissfully new to him.

CHAPTER VII.

WHEN they had left Gerda at the Berkeley and were in the narrow tunnel of Lansdowne Passage on their way to Curzon Street, Elspeth asked him, "Was that the woman you had dinner with the other night, Jerrold?"

"Yes, Tommy Masklyn's wife. What do you think of her?" "Very smart, of course. Do you see much of her?"

Jerrold wondered at the question. Elspeth couldn't be jealous. She never cared enough for that.

"Mer her for the first time the other night. Why do you ask?" "No particular reason. I should think she'd be very interesting to talk to."

"So that was all your reason for asking," thought Jerrold. "If things were right between us you'd worry a great deal more than that."

Aloud he said: "Yes, very interesting. She plays the piano most beautifully."

Miss Freyne, Jerrold's aunt Alma, was one of those singular women capable of devoting themselves to a comparatively trivial cause with the fanatical frenzy of a Crusader. Thus the motive power which had kept her at her chicken farm for fifteen years, long after she had made more than enough by her strenuous endeavor to keep her in moderate comfort for the rest of her life.

Mrs. Volney was well installed at 19A Derby street, when Elspeth and Jerrold arrived from their walk. Her warm greeting to them both was the outward and visible sign of her triumph over good work well done. There was something sacramental about her. "Well, here come the young people" which even Elspeth seemed to resent, for she brushed it aside and went to her room.

Jerrold was surprised at this. She never let anything disturb her in the ordinary way. He, though he felt an avowed guest, could not get on his feet, but inwardly he pictured

A paper that goes into the home. Dependable, fearless, entertaining and educational.

2 HUB MEN SET TO BE HEARD IN RUM PLOT

Six Appear in Portland (Me.) Court on Charge of Liquor Smuggling

Portland, Me., Sept. 4.—A local patrolman, two Boston men, two New York men, and one local citizen, face court here today charged with conspiracy to smuggle liquor into this country. The six were arrested when they appeared, according to the police charges, at a rendezvous to deliver whiskey. More than 600 cases of the whiskey were seized as well as two cars and a truck used for carrying the contraband.

The local policeman was William W. Wallace of the police or a corps. The others arrested were Joseph P. Shaffer, No. 125 Cottage street, Boston; Morris Abramson, No. 43 Vail street, Chelsea, Mass.; Murray Rosen and James Rosen of New York, and Herbert Currier of this city.

According to the federal prohibition agents, who led in the arrest, the money for the contraband had been paid to Shaffer and the appointment for the delivery made. The prohibition forces hid in a vicarage near the appointed spot and surrounded the men when they appeared with their illegal cargo.

ELEVATOR BOY'S WORK PAID BY COOLIDGE

Arthur P. Nelson, a President Coolidge for the efficient manner in which he cleared out the elevator offices in the Security Trust Building at Long alley. Nelson as a boy had been the first to take the President up in his office July 4. In the letter was enclosed a $5 bill.

REVERE MAYOR HEARS POLICE ARE TOO FEE

At the close of the conference between Mayor John Walsh and Revere and supervisors of the police department, for public consumption, at least, was the statement, constantly repeated for months by Chief of Police Dyer: "We have an insufficient number of officers to properly protect lives and property."

MELROSE PASTOR NEW EVANGELISM DIRECTOR

Rev. John H. Curtis, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Melrose, has been named as the new director of evangelism for the American Baptist Association.

LEAVE FOR KENTUCKY TO BECOME NUNS

At top, Mahel Grant of East Boston; at left, Florence M. Butler of Medford; and, right, Mary J. Butler of East Boston, three of the 20 Greater Boston girls who will enter Dominican order.

NO MORE MONEY NEEDED FOR MACKINAC RELIEF

The Mackinac Island relief fund has been declared closed by the Mackinac Island Relief Committee. The fund was organized to raise money for the relief of the island's poor, but the committee has decided that the fund is now self-sufficient and no more money is needed.

NEW B. & M. TERMINAL PLANNED

Purchase of Land in Lechmere Square Section Believed Indication of Move

The North Station is to pass into history and its place will be taken by a new terminal to be erected in Lechmere square, Cambridge, if the acquisition of property in that section by the Boston & Maine Railroad and other signs of activity be true.

For some time the railroad has been buying up property in and about Lechmere square, and it is believed that the new terminal will be built on the site of the old one.

The new terminal will be a large and modern structure, and it is believed that it will be completed within a few years.

OFFICIALS COMPLAIN

Officials of the Boston & Maine Railroad are complaining that the new terminal will be a great loss to the city, and that it will be a great expense to the city.

They believe that the new terminal will be a great loss to the city, and that it will be a great expense to the city.

HUMAROCK RUM BOOBY BY SELECTION

Inspired by Fence Removal, They Say: Landings Are Called Impracticable

Private, Sept. 4.—Charges laid to Governor Fuller by Summer residents of Humarock regarding alleged rum-running there were today branded as ridiculous and absurd by the Selection in their first official reply.

They declared that anyone at all familiar with Humarock knows the island is a barren, rocky, and desolate place, and that the charges were inspired by the recent demolition of a fence separating the island from the mainland.

The Selection further stated that neither they, nor the police, have received any complaints of rum-running, and that they know of the allegations being what they have read in the newspapers.

To such their argument the Selection replied that it was a fact that a party of men had been seen on the island, and that the Selection was now investigating the matter.

The Selection also stated that they were now investigating the matter, and that they were now investigating the matter.

SHREPPING THE FALL

I almost convinced that people who have continued their climate is changing are right, for I am sure that when I went to school in September was quite a chilly month, where as now we have some of our warmest weather in 10-and with our warm September I am sure that our weather is changing.

Did you ever stop to think that right in your little run of mustard is the best of the religious service? Mustard really possesses remarkable digestive qualities and because of its popular and pleasing flavor it is a "mustard" in the process of digestion. It also stimulates and increases the appetite.

The mustard in the world is the mustard in the world. The mustard in the world is the mustard in the world. The mustard in the world is the mustard in the world.

DAILY SHORT STORY

GOOD LOSERS

By Lily Wandel

MIRIAM, mentally cataloging her bright, "Sounds good, but I'm fated up for this evening, Pete Martin."

"Te gods!" he interrupted incredulously, "you wouldn't waste your time on that wreck?"

"Wreck?" questioned Miriam with a light laugh, "two hundred pounds of hard muscle! Besides, I know Pete since he was a kid. He had a position here when he came out of college, then he went to the city and stayed five years. Now he's back landed a mighty fine position in Dunmore's office."

"The eighteenth," Kent mentioned casually.

"Eighteenth what?" Miriam asked with a light laugh.

"Just his eighteenth position, that's all. You see I saw a good bit of Pete in the city. All I can say of Pete is that he's a good loser. Soon as he gets fired, or sees the unmistakable signs of being asked to resign, he squares his shoulders and blithely asks another position."

Miriam stared. "A good loser? Did that mean?"

"Well, what of it?" she asked with a light laugh.

"Wonderful chance at Dunmore's."

"Eighteenth what?" Miriam asked with a light laugh.

"Just his eighteenth position, that's all. You see I saw a good bit of Pete in the city. All I can say of Pete is that he's a good loser. Soon as he gets fired, or sees the unmistakable signs of being asked to resign, he squares his shoulders and blithely asks another position."

Miriam stared. "A good loser? Did that mean?"

"Well, what of it?" she asked with a light laugh.

"Wonderful chance at Dunmore's."

with deep earnestness, "you simply must make good! Throw all your heart and soul into it. Be eager, intensely eager!" she urged.

Pete looked at her with hopeless, weary eyes. "Miriam, I've been so eager, so eager, so terribly anxious to please—oh, you can't understand!"

"Understand? When he hasn't so intensely desired of winning? Her eyes grew soft with sympathy.

"That's my whole trouble, Miriam. I'm so glowing so fervent, so tremendously anxious to get ahead that I go there all I possess at once. The sad that other fellows stretch over a lifetime, I crowd into a few weeks. I'm at my top notch right off the bat."

"If you can't keep up the pace. If it were a case of making good in a couple of weeks and then changing jobs, being new faced, I'd buy all right. You can't understand, can you?"

How could she tell him of her own "experience" of the experience? It was so different. You've got to pull yourself together, you—"

"It was tired today."

"He felt—and knew it was absurd—that he was pulling her down with him. He'll get another job, Miriam. The Speedbit people need a bookkeeper."

"You have a wonderful chance at Dunmore's," she impressed upon him maybe they'll take me. Say, they put out a peach of a rider!"

Suddenly, swiftly, Miriam was on her feet, her eyes round and sparkling. "Don't you dare apply for a bookkeeper's job, Pete Martin! Don't you see that you've tried after jobs in vain? Don't you see that you've no business in those positions, no wonder you lost interest! The work poisoned you!"

To Tell Cars.

"You're going to sell cars for the Speedbit people. You're going to put all your energy, all your wonderful enthusiasm in each sale! Each new customer will be a brand new job! You're going over the top with a bang! And there were tears of joy in her eyes as her fingers met his outstretched hands.

That night was Miriam's introduction to sleeplessness. Was Pete Martin her new sales position? Was this the end of the long list of "beasts" she tried to be "awfully happy about," but Kent's brown head and drawing voice made the night a hateful one.

Four months later, she met Kent at the Country Club. He held out a periodical. "See the latest number of the Auto Trade Journal? There's running a feature article about Pete, Speedbit's star salesman. Miriam, nobody knows as much about you as that. Pete told me. Quite unexpectedly he took her hand and held it as if it saved him from drowning. "Miriam, you'll never know how I have suffered these months!"

She gasped a little. Was this the disinterested Kent, the specter of her sleepless nights?

"When I had the chance to win about Foolishly, I listened to gossip about you changing sweethearts with the seasons. But now I know it's too late, that you amply just interest in them like Pete did in her office work." He looked at her out of stricken, pleading eyes.

Not Too Late.

"But it isn't too late," she whispered and because they were nicely bidden by a porch pillar, he gave her the kisses she had dreamed of. "Kent, dear," she released herself, "I want to tell you something. What the people said about my being Kent's wasn't true. I wasn't lack of interest—and stopped suddenly. Why? I'm of the people that simply spluttered and died, of her trying and losing."

"Dearest, I know," he smiled, "something was lacking and that was love!" Perhaps he was right. "You've done so much for Pete, now what will you do for me?"

Just a touch of jealousy. "I'll make a successful husband out of you!" and she kept her promise.

Former President of the American Medical Association

"I am quite fit, thank you," said an English guest at my house a good many years ago in response to my morning greeting. I had not heard the expression before, although I had but previously spent much time in England. When I returned there a few months later, I found that the English, as a very distinctive habit of conversation and one which I expected soon to pass into the limbo of the forgotten, like many other examples of slang, or semi-slang, it seemed to serve no useful purpose, seemed to be so expressive of just what one wishes to say on the subject that it seems to have become practically obsolete. I would say that this implies much more than the washing of hands and feet and teeth—although these three things are of primary importance. If it is

By Nat N. Dorfman

Now that you ask me to admit blank, I am sorry to admit I am not a good doctor. In fact, far from it. I studied medicine at a correspondence school. My diploma was obtained by fraud. I don't reveal these facts as a rule to any of my patients, but since you asked me—

"Oh, thanks, John, but I won't need any pin money this week. I've saved all the pin money you gave me last week and will use that, if necessary. I don't believe in spending money on anything but absolute necessities hereafter. I've just come good to me in the past. In fact, too easy on money matters, and just because you happen to have it to be so easy for my squandering it, even
